Not illustrated. 1891 Excerpt: ...The first witness called was Risk Allah himself, and he was examined and cross-examined at enormous length. The cross-examination, indeed, lasted for several days. The depositions from Brussels were then read, and other witnesses were called. The evidence at an end, Serjeant Parry proceeded to review it, and on the afternoon of June 20th, Mr. Coleridge commenced his speech for the defendant, and a most exhaustive speech it was. The Lord Chief Justice afterwards summed up; and those who were present, and had known his lordship both as an advocate and a Judge, charac188 LONG CASES AND LARGE FEES. terised the summing-up as a masterpiece, even for him. The jury retired to consider their verdict, and after an absence of two hours they returned into Court. The foreman stated that they had agreed that the verdict should be for the plaintiff, but that on the matter of damages they were eleven to one. He asked whether counsel on both sides would accept the verdict of the eleven. It so happened that I was the only person present representing the defendants; and though Mr. Baker Greene assented to the verdict, I, in the absence of my leaders, declined the responsibility of doing so. The jury accordingly again retired, and returned half an hour later, with a verdict for the plaintiff upon both issues, damages being given at,?960. CHAPTER XXVII. ADHUC SUB JUDICE LIS EST. Long cases and large fees: Mr. Coleridges observation--Chief Justice Cockburns remarks about the Press--What another Chief Justice said: Who is Mr. Corney Grain?--The Daily Telegraphs leading article--The necessity for a Court of Criminal Appeal--Instances of how it
