Pray therefore, saintly men, that I may receive forgiveness from Christ p. 389. the great God and our Saviour, both for what has been written and for what has been omitted. The end. 14. Of the same to John and Philoxenus and Thomas 521-7. the bishops, confessors on the hill of Marde. From those after banishment, from the /th book the 2jst letter.) On reading your sanctities letter I thought of Elijah the Tishbite prophet, who when persecuted by impiety betook himself to the hill of Horeb, and as a reward for his tribulation gained the privilege of seeing and conversing with God, so far as is possible for men. When He that knows all things before they are as it is written¹ approached him like a father, and assumed the appearance of ignorance in order to comfort him, like a father who comforts his beloved son by playing with him, and in order to lighten the weariness and distress that he had incurred from the long journey, and said to him, What doest thou here, Elijah?, he stirred up the zeal that was blazing in him and answered very hotly (and that though speaking to Him who knows all things and whom nothing escapes), I have been zealous for the Lord the AllRuler, because the sons of Israel have forsaken thee. Thine altars they have thrown down: and thy p. 390. prophets they have slain with the sword. And I only am left: and they seek my life to take it away.² And He put fresh heart in him by revealing
